

TALIESIN EAST

2 miles south of Spring Green

A superb example of Frank Lloyd Wright's organic architecture, growing out of his Prairie Style work, Taliesin was the second great center of his activity (after Oak Park, Illinois). The principal surviving complexes are Taliesin III (1925), Hillside Home School (1902, 1933), and Midway Farm (1938); additions include those done by architects who studied under Wright after the founding of the Taliesin Fellowship in 1932. Wright lived here each summer until his death in 1959, and the complex is fully representative of the theories and taste of this most famous of American architects. It continues to be the summer headquarters of the Taliesin Fellowship and is open to visitors. (See also Taliesin West, Maricopa County, Arizona.)
